John Cockerill was satis-ded that he was innocent of Prickett's mutder, and he did all that he could to stem the tide against him, but in vain. Griffen awore most positively that he had no pistal on the night in question, and that consequently he could not have fired the fatal shot. Public opinion was against him, however. He had killed a man before. It was a case of a dog hav-ing a bad name. He was sentenced to death, and in duc time the gallows was his end. Mr. Cockerill was true to Griffer to the last, and stood by his side when he was swung off into eternity. In addition to writing up the case for his own paper he helped report it for The Cincir Enquirer. He was offered a place on its local staff a few weeks later. He ac-cepted it and then and there began his brilliant daily newspaper career.

Though Cockerill believed Griffen in nocent it was not for several years after that he knew that he was and learned the true story of how Prickett had been killed chester.

First, get a wife; second, be patient.

You may have great trials and perpiexities in your business but do, not, therefore, carry to your house a cloudy or contracted brow. Your wife may have tri-list, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in classing from her brow all clouds of clouds (gloom. To this we would add always keep a hottle of Chamberlatin's Cough Remeily in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooher or later, Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by J. James Wood, Druggist Druggist
